Production of documentary films on case studies of improved access to sanitation & clean drinking water in Jharkhand

Organizational context:

UNDP also provides policy and technical support on environmental issues and sustainable development.

Please visit our website: www.in.undp.org for more details.

Background for the Film:

According to the World Health Organization, 80% of all diseases in the developing world are associated with inadequate access to sanitation, safe drinking water and poor hygiene. In India, more than 122 million households are without toilets, with around 600 million people defecating in the open as reported by UNICEF. Further, the use of existing toilets is also limited due to a range of factors including poor construction quality, lack of water and inadequate maintenance services. This resulting widespread open defecation causes contamination of local water resources and spread of disease through insects. It is estimated that around 400,000 children under five years of age die each year in the country due to diarrhoea. Several million more suffer from multiple episodes of diarrhoea and still others fall ill on account of Hepatitis A, enteric fever, intestinal worms and eye and skin infections caused by poor hygiene and unsafe drinking water. The direct impact of poor sanitation facilities and resulting infectious diseases (especially diarrhoea) on malnutrition is well established now. The World Health Organization (WHO) estimates that around half the cases of malnutrition, are linked to repeated diarrhoea or intestinal worm infections, often leading to persistent, nutrition-linked poverty. Education is also impacted when adolescent girls especially drop out of school due to poor toilet facilities. Further, the health and security of women in rural as well as urban areas, without access to toilets is compromised as they are forced to wait until nightfall to defecate, often facing harassment in the process.

It is in this context that the Government of Jharkhand's efforts over recent years to promote improved access of rural communities in the state to sanitation and clean drinking water become very significant. The State government has already documented some of this work through a state-level NGO, Nimitta. This documentation covers initiatives supported directly by the Government of Jharkhand, corporate social responsibility initiatives and NGOs. The State Government has sought the support of UNDP to further strengthen this document and for publishing it for wider dissemination. Through this Terms of Reference, UNDP seeks to identify an appropriate production house/ video company who will develop a film based on processes and impacts drawn from nine case studies selected from the draft document. This film will accompany the publication.

Objectives:

To showcase significant achievements on drinking water and sanitation, drawn from selected case studies highlighted in the draft document for the publication on 'Innovations, Policies and Practices in

Implementation of Water and Sanitation Programmes - Case Studies from Jharkhand'. UNDP requires the immediate services of a video company/production house for the following:
